

Spectrum

The word "Spectrum" is rendered in a stylized, 3D font. The letter "S" is red, while the remaining letters "pectrum" are yellow. A yellow teardrop-shaped outline encircles the letters "pectrum". Two thin yellow lines intersect diagonally, forming an 'X' shape that passes through the teardrop outline.

College Song

Hail to London Teachers' College
Sing her praises to the sky
Where we come to grow in knowledge
And good fellowship runs high
We're the cream of all you dream of
In our sports and studies too
We will never never fold
Watch the crimson and the gold

Who are we?

L. T. C.

PRIME MINISTER · PREMIER MINISTRE

I am very pleased to extend my warm greetings to the students and staff of London Teachers' College and to all readers of "Spectrum '65". I am particularly happy to address a few words to the students.

By coming to London Teachers' College you have answered the call to play a positive role in the education of our young citizens; a role second to none in the building of our nation. In your earlier years, you acquired knowledge; you learned the essentials of good citizenship. During your stay at the London Teachers' College, you are being taught now to impart this knowledge to others; now, by good example, good citizenship is inculcated. When it will be your turn to put into practice the training that you have received, I know that as teachers you will make a fine contribution to our country through the education of its children. There can be no finer form of service.

You have my best wishes. I am confident that you will not fail in your important work.

We would like to give our deepest appreciation and thanks to Miss Pipe for her valuable contribution to our yearbook. Without her outstanding artistic talents, our "SPECTRUM '65" certainly would have lost much of its colour.

Thank you, Delphine.

When you received your "SPECTRUM '65" the unusually dynamic cover gave you a preview of the great things contained in our book. The credit for this creation goes to Sister Lyn Marie, who spent long hours designing and drawing. Thank you Sister for all your painstaking work on, and between, the covers.

Message To The Graduating Class Of 1965

65 - 19 + 1965 + 90 = 2102 !

This awesome piece of arithmetic has been haunting me.

Many of you young people will still be teaching children well into the first decade of the two thousands. A few of the children whom you teach will even live on into the 22nd century.

What sort of world will you be readying them for? -- One of instant sight and speech by each of us throughout our seven continents and out into space as well? One where as many footloose souls will have ventured to the moon and Mars as now travel to Ethiopia? One where poverty and disease and ignorance and crime have been all but banished? One where that kind of crime we call war has at last been conquered by the Golden Rule? (Otherwise we can be sure there will be no world at all.)

In any case, it will be your work to help prepare children for this world. So much of what you teach in the way of new insights into mathematics and science--and that all-important science of living together--will be strange to us old codgers.

At the same time, I should like to think that much of what you teach will still be what we oldsters already know, but alas, have not learned fully--how to speak and write our glorious English language clearly, forcefully, and gracefully; how to read and enjoy our literary treasures of the past; how to enrich that increased leisure which will otherwise simply become increased boredom, to enrich it by music and painting and those other arts that give meaning to life; and how to work out in our own lives those master principles of living which are already at least two thousand years old.

It will indeed be a Brave New World that you teach in; and your work will be one of the keys which make it run. How I envy your chance to help mould this world to come into a better one!

F. C. Biehl
Principal

Vice-Principal

As one reviews the history of education during past centuries, one finds the pendulum swinging back and forth with surprising regularity. Similar problems arise but the solutions must necessarily vary due to changing circumstances.

Three centuries ago humanitarianism, liberalism, nationalism and industrialism each had an important impact upon educational thought and practices. Today these forces are still present but the relationship to education has changed. The important question now is how education may be used to control these movements.

Humanitarianism was previously on an individual or institutional basis. Now it has expanded and is racial, national and international in its scope.

Liberalism, which involves freedom from restraint, is now somewhat out of control and in some cases has deteriorated to licence.

Nationalism is more rampant than it has ever been. Nations are securing their independence before their education has progressed sufficiently to enable them to govern themselves successfully.

The changes brought about by automation and nuclear power make the former Industrial Revolution appear trivial.

These factors provide our educational system with their greatest challenge. To meet this challenge is the task of our educators. I can only hope that your graduation from this college will be the beginning of your education. Only an enlightened body of educators who never cease learning can produce an enlightened nation.

L. B. Hyde,
Vice-Principal.

Minister of Education

For nearly 120 years, our Teachers' Colleges, and before them our Normal Schools, have shown a marked ability to adapt to the changing needs of public education. During the past year you will have studied the uses of educational television, the values of programmed learning, and the possibilities of team teaching. There are innovations in teaching methods that were completely unknown even five or ten years ago.

This ability to keep up with modern trends indicates to me the strength and vigour of our teacher-training institutions, and I hope that you will graduate from the London Teachers' College with your own share of strength and vigour which will enable you not only to teach effectively but to continue your own professional development.

As you take up your positions in the schools of Ontario, the best wishes of the Department of Education go with you.

William G. Davis,
Minister of Education.

To the students of London
Teachers' College:

Learning is the beacon of our character, and knowledge, that remote harbour of our very being. Education may be termed as the rudder of the ship that guides us through the perilous storms of life, undaunted by the rocky shoals of prejudice and the murky swells of failure. "Spectrum" has been designed as the reflecting sea which will mirror this year's activities as we, the helmsmen of our own lives, like those Hellenistic captains of Grecian ages, navigate through the concealed reefs of our existence. The year-book crew, comprised of many industrious young men and women, has provided the impetus for the creation of this unique "Spectrum".

Their unfailing efforts toward its production have been the guiding light in the formation of this, our college yearbook.

In future years, this permanent log will afford an unbreakable chain between we the students, our very capable masters, and the many cherished memories acquired on this memorable voyage of 1964-65. In June, the anchored fleet will separate, each vessel setting sail for distant shores and diverse ports-of-call, carrying with it the fruitful cargo of the impressive events experienced here, at our mooring, London Teachers' College.

Advisor

May I salute Captain Chamberlain and his lusty crew, who have weathered the storms of '64-'65 and kept for us L. T. C. 's "log", Spectrum '65. I proudly invite all able-bodied seamen aboard to relive the adventures of the happy voyage as you scan the record.

Your maiden-voyage has been successful but changes in today's educational marine are taking place so rapidly that you must recognize that education for sailing the sea-of-life is a continuing process if you are going to give the proper leadership in this crucial period of the world's history.

Skillful mariners must sail by all winds, and you are certain to find teaching a full and satisfying life if you will accept your responsibilities with a sense of moral and spiritual obligation.

Bon voyage,

J. B. Elford

STAKE

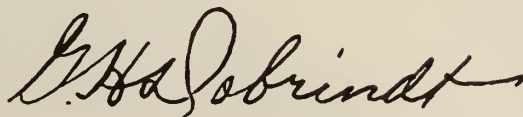

THE GREAT LIVE ON

Sheathed the sabre,
as yet untarnished,
wrenched from the warrior's hand
by Time,
his indomitable foe.

Stilled the orator,
but not the voice
that rallied men to hope in hopeless times, stirring the freedom-loving everywhere to offer freely of their blood,
their sweat,
their tears.

Idle the pen,
the brush, the palette,
creation ceased,
but leaving ample heritage
of thought and skill,
all indestructible.

The great live on.
Wherever stern defiance
meets a wrong,
or voice of challenge
beards a tyrant in his keep,
or hand is raised in sign of righteous victory - again and yet again
he shall relive
his finest hour.

A handwritten signature in cursive script, reading "G. H. Dobrindt". The signature is fluid and elegant, with a long, sweeping tail on the final letter.

ORGANIZATIONS

Prime Minister

Education, one of the mightiest forces in our society, may be compared to the sturdiest of ships sailing our seas. We can also compare it to the guiding markers; the seemingly insignificant buoys.

Teachers have also been regarded as insignificant, but without them progress would come to a standstill. Without buoys, unknown or dangerous waters could not be navigated safely, just as without teachers the closed doors of knowledge could never be opened. Thus, we as graduating teachers should guide our charges in their search for truth and knowledge.

Ocean guides are built strongly to withstand the eroding forces of the elements and we can only hope that we have the strength to stand by our conviction, fighting for reform when and where necessary.

If it were not for the guiding influence of teachers in our society, the great ship "Education", would surely founder on the treacherous shoals in her path.

COLLEGE CHOIR

Mr. MacDowell:

Thomas Lovell Beddoes wrote a poem titled "Song From the Ship". When one reads this, one notes a striking similarity between his sea creatures and our group of singers.

The mermaid's pearly song, bubbling up through the seas, is the cue to fling broad the sail, and dip deep the oar of life.

Without the college choir the wind that fills the sails of the life and spirit of our college would move us with less lustre through each day. Under your tutelage, Mr. MacDowell, we have been enabled to discover the beauty of music, We shall not forget it.

Thank you.....

THE ARTS

The Hanging

*Bring in the prisoner.
Why walk so slowly you whose life was fast?
Quick to take another's, but your own refuse to give.
Goad him.
God waits, and we must send him before the judgment throne.
Confirm Oh Lord we do what's right.*

*He stood silently, not sensing movement here and there,
All making ready, him to prepare.
Though I walk in the valley of death. . .the voice droned on.
Why me, he thought.
I'm not the one, but they will not believe.
Again he thought, when will it be done?
This cruel doing, hoping it is right but never really knowing.*

*The rope felt rough as they placed it behind his ear.
It jiggled as the knot drew tight, burning his flesh.
I still can feel. I'm still a man.
Then why stand I here? And stand, and stand, and stand.*

They tied his hands behind his back and pulled a sack over his face so men could not see, nor he, the men who did this thing.

All waited. The time drew nigh. Life's minutes ticked off until the hour prescribed by law reached out and tripped the platform, launching him into eternity.

*It broke.
The rope broke and tumbled after him, coiling across his broken body.
A bone ripped through his fleshy leg, and there he lay,
the jumbled mass of what was man.*

*Too bad.
Poor show.
Hardly ever happens.*

*But we were right.
Weren't we?*

William Johnson

The Fog

*A creeping nuisance
That seeps from the dank filth
Of the swamps,
Across our food,
To the cities.
Shifting and swirling,
Inching on and on.*

*A liquid cloud
That oozes into back alleys
And niches
Of infinite size,
Making the dark, darker.
Surging and swallowing,
Gorging it all.*

*A fiendish terrorist
That frightens the homeward women
Who hear pursuing footsteps,
And yet cannot see
Through your misty shroud.
Sweeping and sinking,
Muffling the cries.*

*A masked murderer
That blinds the tired motorist,
And drowns out his lights,
Until the thud of a skull
Dents the polished fender.
Smiling and snickering,
Laughing to tears.*

J.D. Scott

No Death

H. Sherman

Time is

*Buildings crumble, flagpoles fall,
Grasses wither, trees die,
Echoing footsteps in dusty hall;
Bridges on river bottoms lie,
What is eternal? Wait and you'll see.*

*Mothers die, sisters, fathers too,
Grandmothers, pets, and insects rot.
Ripples from life run away soon;
A mountain is numb from bottom to top.
What is eternal? Wait and you'll see.*

*Sounds go away and soon cease bouncing,
But wait and you'll see, see, see, see,
A clock ceases, but its reason, never,
A day ceases, but then, there's tomorrow.
Time was then, now, soon. Time is eternal.*

The Gull

*I saw it flying all alone,
Alone in the mist and the dawn;
Its feathered arms spread wide
And gliding high above the tide.
It turned and circled,
Descending slowly, gracefully
As a random flake of snow;
Settled on the blue-green waves
And was carried almost to the shore.*

*The silvered stretch of sand was bare
Of life and motion,
Shrouded in the morning mists.
The waves were growing stronger,
I heard only their gentle lapping
And its wild clear call.*

To Love

*To the sweetest love I have — from then,
To the blissful times we share — to now,
To the togetherness we'll have — till when?
To eternity, with lasting joy.*

*To the hands we hold, may they never part,
To the wondrous thoughts deep in my heart,
To the sharing of our tender kiss,
To death in sweet, sweet bliss.*

The Discus Thrower

*He stands in the golden sunlight
His body bronzed and smooth —
Pounding heart
Trembling hands
Roving eyes.
He straightens, steps forward —
It is Time.
A deep breath
A fervent prayer
Bended knee
Flexed arm
Sweated brow —
 the effort!
Supreme and mighty
Draining all.
From his body,
And his soul,
His fingers, — and beyond.
 A thud
 A silence. . .
 A deafening cheer!*

Flight Lieut. I. A. Stevenson, D. F. J. , C. D.

July 1, 1867 was the birthday of a united Canada. February 15, 1965 saw the birth of a new flag, whose purpose is to preserve and perpetuate that unity.

It is born inheriting great riches. The maple leaf stands for all the races who together built this land into one nation.

It is great at its birth. Whether it will continue great rests largely in our strong young hands.

Newspapers Stimulate Classroom Interest!

There's nothing like a newspaper for awakening a lively interest in the world around us — either in or out of school. The newspaper has become a valuable teaching aid in a whole range of subjects, depending on the initiative of the teacher. For details on how newspapers can help in classroom studies, write:

Classroom Delirium

One square, two squares,
In a little box.
Push square, move square,
Register all thoughts.

One base, two base,
In a counting system.
Add base, try base,
Use your intuition.

One word, two words,
In a little sentence.
Main thought; gain thought,
Use their independence.

One sketch, two sketch,
In a little picture.
Paint-brush, paste-brush,
Identify the texture.

One bug, two bugs,
In a homemade net,
One leaf, two leafs,
All that I could get?

Oh come, oh look,
See see see.
Straight line, curved line,
Print the letter B.

Day book, grey book,
For each teaching week.
Rule book, cruel book,
Discipline we seek!

One note, two notes,
In a singing scale,
Which pipe - pitchpipe,
Sing or you could fail.

One book, two books,
In a little row.
Picture files, catalogues
Now they're on the go.

One war, two wars,
Will there be a third?
Pacify, actify,
Then you will have heard.

Socrates, Plato,
Aristotle too!
Chinese, Hebrew,
Aren't we nearly through?

One step, two steps,
In a little dance,
Volleyball, Basketball,
Do we have a chance?

Upper plate, lower plate,
Have you got a denture?
One meal, two meals,
That'll surely clencher.

One bell, two bells,
Classes now begin,
Three bells, four bells,
Recess time again!

Maureen Robertson

Out of the wisdom of the past; a signpost for the future:

If the human race would wish to have a prolonged and indefinite period of material prosperity, they've only got to behave in a peaceful and helpful way towards one another and science will do for them all that they wish and more than they can dream.

Nothing is final; change is unceasing and it is very likely that mankind has a lot more to learn before they come to their journey's end. We might even find ourselves, in a few years, moving along a broad, smooth causeway of peace and plenty instead of roaming and peering round along the rim of hell.

And lastly, we may, by patience, courage, and in orderly progression, reach someday, with God's blessing, the shelter of a calmer and kindlier age.
